

Field Trip FAQ

Eight questions. Straight answers.

Do you really roll out a red carpet?

Yes. A literal red carpet at the bus door. It costs almost nothing. It signals everything.

Why do you contact the teacher a week before?

Because surprises are for birthday parties, not field trips. Teachers are managing 25 kids. The more I know in advance, the better their day goes.

What's the joke script about?

Age-appropriate, sport-specific printed jokes. A volleyball team gets different material than a fifth-grade science class. It breaks the ice in the first 90 seconds and they're on your side for the rest of the trip.

What if they lose?

The playlist changes. You don't blast a win song after a tough loss. I have a playlist for that too.

You actually send a thank you note — same night?

Every time. It takes four minutes. It gets remembered for years.

What certifications do you hold?

CDL with School Bus (S) Endorsement and Mountain Certification. BVSD trained and cleared.

What's the mountain certification about?

Operating a fully loaded bus on steep canyon grades requires specific training and technique. Left Hand Canyon to 8,500 feet with 65 kids and no retarder isn't a standard route. Mountain cert means you're ready for it.

Why does any of this matter?

Because parents notice. Teachers talk. Principals hear about the bus driver who sent a thank you note and brought water bottles. That's your transportation department's brand, built one field trip at a time.
